His musical influences are rooted in the Italo disco's sound, the style of dance music in Europe during the 1980s. "Italo disco" was one of the world's first forms of complete electronic dance music that evolved in Italy, Spain, the Netherlands and other parts of Europe and invaded the dance charts worldwide. Italo disco music had a distinct, futuristic and ample sound, which was created using synthesizers, drum machines and vocoders. His contemporary house music still keeps vibes and sounds from that period as well as from original soundtracks from cult movies such as Breakfast at Tiffany's, La Dolce Vita and The Party. Davide usually fuses these sounds with an uplifting electro/funky house twist.
